Beyond the Basics: Latency & motivation: it's all about timing and speed. What is latency? Latency is the time between the cue/stimulus and the behavior itself. For example, latency is time between when you say the "down" command and that the dog starts performing that particular behavior (lies down).

Many times, the root of behavioral problems is a lack of enough exercise. You'd be surprised what an extra hour of walking per day will do to calm your dog, boost confidence and reduce aggression. At Beyond the Basics, we'll train your dog to walk on a treadmill so they can walk on your treadmill at home or you can bring them in to walk on ours.
